Entertainment team returns to Lajes Nov. 5

Crossroads Staff

Tops in Blue will entertain Team Lajes Nov. 5 at 7:30 p.m. in the Portuguese hangar.

The 90-minute performance is described as an "entertainment showcase for the entire family" and is made up of music, dance and comedy.

"This is a great family show," said Rich Christie, 65th Services Squadron. "The performers are all active-duty Air Force members, and their mission is performing for military personnel and their families throughout the world."

According to Christie, Tops in Blue organizers and sponsors have giveaways before the event, and during the entire tour season.

"There's a $200 AAFES gift certificate from First Command and AT&T has a 1,000 minute phone card to give away," Christie said.

People can fill out entry cards before the program, he said and the drawing will be held right before it begins. All entries will be used for two additional drawings later in the tour for two separate AT&T calling cards with 10,000 minutes.

Bus transportation will run from the Commissary parking lot to the Portuguese hangar from 6:15 - 7:30 p.m., with return service right after the show, Christie said.

Attacks reaction to success

■ President, security team meet with ambassador, CENTCOM leader

By Jim Garamone
American Forces
Press Service

WASHINGTON -- The more successful the United States is in Iraq, the more the terrorists will attempt to undermine that success, President Bush said today from the White House.

Bush and his security team met with coalition administrator Ambassador L. Paul Bremer and U.S. Central Command chief Army Gen. John Abizaid this morning.

The meetings followed two days of attacks in Iraq.

Terrorists launched missile attacks against the Al Rasheed Hotel Oct. 26 that killed one American and wounded 15 coalition military and civilian personnel. Today, news reports indicate that as many as 40 Iraqis died in the suicide bombing of the international Red Cross building in Baghdad. Attacks also were launched against Iraqi police stations, news reports said.

"There are terrorists in Iraq who are willing to kill anybody in order to stop our progress," Bush said. "The more successful we are on the ground, the more these killers will react. And our job is to find them and bring them to justice."

Bremer said the American people shouldn't let the attacks dampen their support for the changes being made in Iraq. "We'll have rough days, such as we've had the last couple of days," Bremer said. "But the overall thrust is in the right direction, and the good days outnumber the bad days. And that's the thing we need to keep in perspective."

Bremer said the electricity is above pre-war levels, schools are open, hospitals are working and the political leadership of the country is coalescing.

Bush said a small handful of "cold-blooded killers, terrorists" are launching these attacks. "These people will kill Iraqis," he said. "They don't care who they kill; they just want to kill. And we will find them."

The president said the Iraqi people understand a handful of people are vested in the former regime and will do whatever it takes to stop this progress. "Our job is to work with the Iraqis to prevent this from happening," he said.

"That's why we're working hard to get more Iraqi policemen. That's why we're working hard to build up the Iraqi armed forces. That's why we're working hard with freedom-loving Iraqis to help ferret these people out before they attack and strike."

AF trains with British Army, exercise leaves impression

ROYAL AIR FORCE MILDENHALL, England -- Members of the 100th and 48th Logistics Readiness Squadrons here embarked on a two-week journey recently, working alongside the British Territorial Army, 166 Supply Regiment for a field training exercise in the Scottish Highlands dubbed Exercise Highland Eagle.

The exercise, which strengthened relations among the two military groups, marked the first time U.S. service members stationed in England were asked to participate in the training and exercise of the soldiers in the Territorial Army, said Maj. Rob Hiles, 496th Logistic Liaison Unit host nation liaison officer. (USAFE News Service)

Center integrates

NELLIS AIR FORCE BASE, Nev. -- The airmen from U.S. Air Forces in Europe's Falconer Air Operations Center are here integrating their craft with pilots and controllers who fly the missions over the "enemy" during Red Flag.

The center is comprised of 100 airmen, mostly from the 32nd Air Operations Group at Ramstein Air Base, Germany, and its sister unit, the Air National Guard's 152nd AOG from Syracuse, N.Y. The airmen plan, coordinate, execute and assess their warfighting capabilities with one objective in mind -- to achieve air and space dominance over the adversary.

Red Flag, the Air Force's premier air combat-training event, is being held here Oct. 19 to 31, and this is the "first time a Falconer ... is taking part in the ... training," said Maj. Mark Wiser, Falconer coordinator for Red Flag.

There has been a drive to get centers involved in Red Flag to bring the command and control aspect of war into the training, officials said.

Mail flowing

BAGHDAD INTERNATIONAL AIRPORT, Iraq -- Eighteen airmen, most wearing two or three stripes, spend several hours a day in a sun-baked warehouse just off the tarmac here. They are touching the lives of each deployed servicemember and civilian in Iraq.

We're responsible for all mail, in and out," said Tech. Sgt. Darrin Robertson, mail control activity team chief with the 447th Expeditionary Communications Squadron. "When planes come in we have to account for every piece of mail."

According to Robertson, his team handles the more than 150,000 pounds of mail per day that flows to and from every air post office in American camps in Iraq.

Cadet charges

U.S. AIR FORCE ACADEMY, Colo. -- An academy cadet was charged Oct. 24 with illegal use and distribution of drugs.

Cadet 1st Class Jacob Billeter was charged with allegedly using Ecstasy, an Ecstasy derivative, cocaine and ketamine. Billeter was also charged with allegedly distributing the drugs and mushrooms containing psilocybin and/or psilocyn. Use and distribution of each substance is a violation of Article 112a of the Uniform Code of Military Justice.

Billeter waived his Article 32 hearing rights, and the case is now going to a general court-martial. A date for the court-martial has not been set.

If convicted, the maximum punishment Billeter faces is 80 years confinement, a dismissal from the academy, and total forfeiture of all pay and allowances.

Leadership lessons can come from a book

By Senior Master Sgt.
William Hartley
USAFE News Service

VOLKEL AIR BASE, Netherlands — As airmen, we're constantly reminded we're all leaders, and as we gain rank and responsibility, the ability to lead becomes more critical.

While I was preparing for promotion testing by reviewing the Promotion Fitness Examination Study Guide, Chapter 7, "NCO Leadership," I was taken aback by the paragraph on self-evaluation and how it's hard to be the complete leader. Rarely will people find someone who can say, "Yes" to each of the questions. So, for each question I tried to think of an example, and realized that great leadership is evident in each NCO assigned here.

New NCOs only have to use their eyes and ears to gain fantastic examples of what works and what doesn't. Great leadership examples aren't exclusive to colonels and chief master sergeants, but are also displayed by our youngest and brightest airmen.

For example, question number one asks: "Do I have the courage to make tough decisions and stand by them?"

This is the toughest question and the most difficult for young supervisors to do. The example I use is a technical sergeant giving an honest, less than firewall mark on an enlisted performance report after repeated feedbacks failed to bring the expected behavior. The troop might have been bright, energetic and very popular within the unit, but he failed to complete mandatory training in the prescribed time. The technical sergeant stuck to his guns on the rating, despite the scrutiny. That's a leader.

Another example reflects on question No. 10: "Am I willing to accept my subordinate's failures as my own, yet immediately recognize their successes as theirs?"

My organization recently completed an in-depth inspection to prepare for our upcoming surety inspection. Within one flight, there were significant failures as well as noted strengths. This particular superintendent was the first to congratulate his airmen whose duties were recognized as superior and accepted the failed areas as his own.

My favorite question is No. 9: "Do I really listen? Can I withhold judgment until I have all the facts?"

Though I have been a first sergeant only a short time, I've been blessed to work for two different commanders who display the gift of patience. When a problem or issue arises, they're not quick to jump to a course of action, they always seem to draw all the appropriate information out of folks before acting. This is leadership at its finest.

Lastly, question No. 4: "Am I willing to do my best with what seems to be inadequate means?"

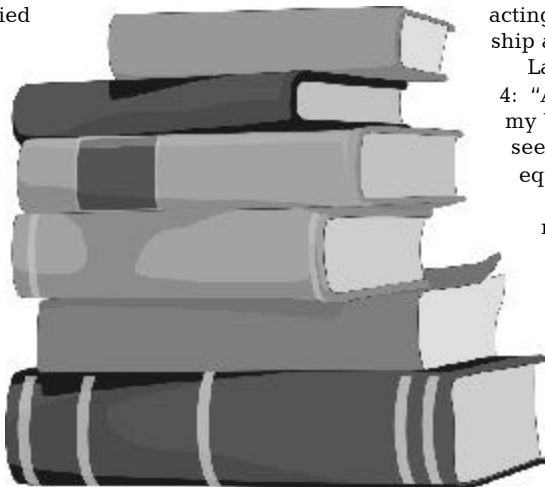

During one of my work center visits, our communication maintenance shop was troubleshooting a piece of equipment. Frustrated that the equipment wasn't responding according to the technical order, I asked if they had additional references. I was surprised to learn that most problems encountered with this equipment weren't listed in the technical order. Over time, they had built an in-house checklist of potential fixes and continued to add to it as unique challenges faced them. Everyday NCOs are doing their best with inadequate technical data to keep the mission going. Fantastic leadership.

I've only covered four questions of the 12 listed in the PFE to show that great leadership happens all around us. New NCOs as well as old can simply look around and see living examples.

It's rare that you will find the perfect leader. Each of us contributes based on our strengths. Each of us have shortcomings to improve. I urge new staff sergeant selects to look around when seeking lessons in leadership. They're all about us.

(Hartley is the first sergeant for the 752nd Munitions Support Squadron)

Get onboard with our new programs

All Aboard!

No. I don't have a desire to be a train conductor. I'm using this phrase to make a point and sound off for all to hear. It's time for all of us to get on board with the "Combat" and Special Interest Programs. I'm calling for all Rising 6 and Top 3 members, officers, and civilians to embrace and adopt these programs as our own and get away from referring to them as programs General Robert "Doc" Foglesong, USAFE commander, sent our way.

At Lajes we have a wonderful opportunity to really make this great base and wing even better, but we will need everyone working as a team, supporting the programs to make this organization the best it can be.

For those of you that may be fairly new to Lajes and not familiar with the programs they are as follows: Combat Education, Combat Flightline, Combat Touch, Combat Intro/Exit, Combat Fitness, Combat Nighthawk, and Combat Proud. The Special Interest Programs are: Hidden Heroes, Project Cheer, Customer College, and Project Wizard.

If you are not sure what these programs are, get with your supervisor, first sergeant, or commander. I'm sure they will be more than willing to fill you in. I also encourage you to look at the USAFE Instruction that spells out each program in detail and understand what they are all about.

There are a lot of project officers working hard at Lajes to make their specific program solid and good for everyone. However, we need the support of Team Lajes to make them all a true success. As I stated in my column a couple of months ago, these programs are geared to making our way we do business better for everyone and they also work toward making our Quality of Life better as well.

If you have a good idea or suggestion that will enhance the programs, please get with the project officers and let them know - they will take all suggestions. As I do every month, I want to invite you to be a guest on my monthly radio show. If you have something you want to promote or just get the word out about a project, organization, or an event let me know and I will be glad to have you on my show.

A Big Thanks for all you do here at Lajes, we have a great team here and we can make it even better for everyone.

All Aboard! See you around Lajes.

ACTION LINE

The Action Line is your means of addressing a problem, concern or challenge to me about something in the 65th Air Base Wing or U.S. Forces Azores.

However, your chain of command should always be your first option. When that's not the answer, then call the Action Line at 2-4240 and I'll address it quickly and with care. Thank you!

Col. Barbara Jacobi
65th Air Base Wing commander

Q: What do we do for working out, once the wind gets so high? Outside running is much different than running on a treadmill, and there aren't enough treadmills at the gym. I'm concerned about passing the fitness test next year if I have to stop my outdoor work out due to inclement weather. Is the new gym going to have an indoor track?

A: You're right - the weather during the winter months on Terceira gets worse. However, the weather flight assures me we don't have more than 8 days of wind stronger than 35 knots, average about 3.4 inches of rain monthly, and have a mean temperature between 53 and 77 degrees year round.

Though there may be days when you'll have to cancel your outdoor workout, the Chase Fitness Center provides a great alternative to handle your fitness needs. Our fitness center exceeds Air Force standards in the number of treadmills and cross trainers it has, and the staff tells me they just bought 2 more treadmills and 5 more cross trainers.

There are plenty of weight machines and free weights, and many different classes offering different workouts are available daily. This coming year will see upgrades to many portions of the fitness and Health and Wellness Centers, and while we don't have funding for a new facility or indoor track, rest assured those are improvements to Lajes Field we are working towards in the future.

NCO remembers Army comrade

by Army Staff Sgt. Nate Orme
American Forces Press Service

BAGHDAD INTERNATIONAL AIRPORT, Iraq — Tech. Sgt. Robert Moore wanted to do something for the friend he had made and lost while serving in Operation Iraqi Freedom. So he got permission to name an airport fuel storage facility after Army Sgt. Roger Rowe, an Army transportation specialist killed by a sniper July 9.

Moore, a fuels specialist who works at the facility, met Rowe when the latter delivered fuel to the airport. At the time, soldiers did not have a place to get a hot meal, so Moore and Tech. Sgt. Charles Twigg set up a place in their workplace building for the soldiers to get some hot Air Force food.

"The soldiers would eat, and then I would play a movie on my portable DVD player that was hooked up to a big (television). They looked forward to coming to (the airport) for dinner and a movie," Moore said.

"My sister and a few of my friends back home would send me (brand-name) coffee and, like everything else I had here, I would share with the soldiers. Sergeant Rowe was quite the coffee drinker, and he was very appreciative of how Sergeant Twigg and I treated the soldiers," Moore said.

"Sergeant Twigg left in July, but I stayed behind so someone would be here to take care of all the soldiers who risk their lives every time they deliver fuel here," he said. "Without guys like Sergeant Rowe, the Air Force could not fulfill its mission here in Iraq."

Rowe, a Tennessee National Guardsman with the 1174th Transportation Command, was five days short of his 55th birthday when he died.

Moore said he got squadron-level approval easily from his unit, the 447th Expeditionary Logistics Squadron, which had a professionally produced sign made to mark the site.

Rowe was a grandfather of seven and a Vietnam veteran, serving there as an Army surgical technician. His battalion commander, Army Lt. Col. Billy Taylor, presented his family in Tennessee with a Bronze Star and Purple Heart in a ceremony for the fallen soldier.

To Your Health

Center helps eliminate grumbles, pains of getting in shape

by 1st Lt. Aaron Wiley
Crossroads contributor

While there are grumbles, grunts, aches and pain associated with getting into shape for the new Air Force fitness test, one emotion not usually associated with the event gushes like a spring in one Lajes office.

Happiness abounds in the 65th Air Base Wing's Health and Wellness Center.

Each of its 6 staff members is prepped and ready to help the base's populace get in shape for the service's upcoming fitness renaissance.

"We're here to help. We can show people the path to a healthier lifestyle. It just takes a little effort on their part," said Capt. Laurie Flagg, who runs the center and is the health promotions element chief.

The center is open to airmen, their family members, Defense Department civilian workers and local nationals who are answering Gen. John Jumper's challenge to be "fit to fight," according to Flagg.

Jumper, the Air Force chief of staff, gave notice to the entire blue team in his Oct. 17 "Sight Picture."

"Commanders, supervisors, and front-line leaders must lead the way — through unit physical training, personal involvement and, most important, by example," he said.

To assist fitness-foraging service members and athletes, the center offers a wealth of programs to help get in shape, including:

— Microfit Assessments. "Microfit" assessments are a way to test physical strength, flexibility and cardiovascular fitness. Ricky Baptista, a degreed kinesiologist, performs a series of physical tests during a 60-minute appointment. Body fat and blood pressure also factor into an overall fitness score. "Based on that score, specific recommendations to improve or maintain the client's fitness level will be made," Flagg said.

— PT Leaders' Course. The center started training unit "Combat Fitness" physical training leaders Oct. 20. "The course will focus on safety and how to administer group physical training, including a hands-on segment where participants will learn first hand how to lead troops to improved fitness levels, according to Flagg. "Group leaders are needed to monitor proper exercise techniques and instill motivation," said Dean Fazzio, Fitness Program Manager.

— Smoking Cessation Classes. "Smoking is the number one cause of death from preventable lifestyle choices," Flagg said. As such, the center offers a series of classes including fitness, nutrition, and medication components that are designed to help smokers or tobacco users quit. "For good," Flagg added.

— Nutrition Programs. "Poor nutrition habits lead to more than 300,000 deaths per year, making it the number two cause of death from preventable lifestyle choices," Flagg said. She teaches a series of classes ranging from how to lower cholesterol and blood pressure, to how to manage weight. These classes and individual appointments are open to active duty members, government employees, and dependents alike.

— Equipment Familiarization. This class teaches students the proper use of fitness center equipment. Flagg said the goal is to reduce injury and confusion.

"One of the staff members will be available to assist fitness center users in making the most out of their workouts by helping them learn how to use the equipment correctly," she said.

— HAWC Library and Incentives Program. Checking out books, tapes or other activities earn participating athletes credits on a card issued by the center. Enough credits earn gifts like t-shirts, bags and more.

While people will continue to grumble and grunt climbing toward fitness goals, Flagg said she knows the effort is worth the initial aches.

She's watched two of the wing's most senior officers — Col. Kurt Klingenger, 65th Air Base Wing vice commander; and Col. Mike Giroux, 65th Mission Support Group commander — work their way through the "Colonels Challenge" with flying colors.

"They are fantastic example of people who may not have been in the best shape to start. But they worked at it and they've accomplished so much," she said.

Meanwhile, Klingenger praised the center's ability to keep he and those who use its services focused.

"There has been a wealth of information, instruction and motivation for me in the commanders fitness challenge," he said. "With meeting the new standards now on our horizon, everyone should know the center can be a valuable asset. The staff is available and motivated. Let's use them."

AF skeet team earns world championship

SAN ANTONIO - For the fourth time in five years, the Air Force's skeet team proved they are the best in the military during the 2003 World Skeet Championship held here Oct. 10 to 18.

The Air Force has not enjoyed this much success since the late 1980s, according to Tom Clayton, from Charleston Air Force Base, S.C., who is team captain.

Six military teams and a total of 1,042 shooters from various countries participated in the championship.

Air Force Team One defeated the Navy team by 19 targets, shooting 2,705 out of 2,750 possible targets.

Air Force also hammered the competition by winning four of the six team events.

Stuart Brown from Seymour Johnson AFB, N.C., led Team

One with a score of 546, while Eric Worley from Peterson AFB, Colo., led Team Two with 535.

Brown was the only shooter of the tournament to hit 24 straight pairs of targets during the 410-bore event in the sudden death shoot-off.

This feat earned him the competition's "champion of champs" title. (Air Force Print News)

Guard, reservists help fight California wildfires

SAN ANTONIO - Airmen are helping combat the wildfires raging in California, officials said Oct. 28.

Two C-130 Hercules equipped with modular airborne firefighting systems began operations Oct. 27, and more will follow.

The system is a self-contained, 3,000-gallon aerial fluid dispersal system that fits in the back of a C-130.

Crews from California Air National Guard's 146th Airlift Wing began flying MAFFS missions over the Simi Fire in the southern part of the state. They have dropped more than 29,000 gallons of retardant on the fire.

Aircrews from the Air Force Reserve's 302nd Wing at Colorado Springs, Colo., are also flying missions.

Pilots from the Wyoming Air National Guard's 153rd Air Wing and the North Carolina Guard's 145th Air Wing are on their way to the region with four more of the modular systems.

The fires, stretching from the Mexican border to the northern suburbs of Los Angeles, have destroyed more than 830 homes and burned out more than 500,000 acres.

California officials said the fires are responsible for at least 15 deaths.

President George W. Bush declared the counties of Los Angeles, San Diego, San Bernardino and Ventura federal disaster areas.
